

Admission requirements, entrance examination and criteria for its evaluation

The admission procedure for study in all doctoral study programmes takes the form of an admission interview in English to verify the knowledge of English language at the communication and professional level. The interview assesses the applicant's ability to solve the chosen topic of the dissertation, including the knowledge required for this purpose (especially professional knowledge of the issue, mathematical apparatus, and statistics), as well as the ability to work with science independently.

The basis for the admission interview is a motivation letter prepared by the applicant in English, containing:

- motivation to study,
- a brief description of the chosen topic of the dissertation thesis and the expected concept of its solution,
- A brief curriculum vitae of the candidate, focusing on the candidate's key qualifications and experience.

According to the Study and Examination Rules for CTU students in Prague, Art. 23 par. 3, the potential supervisor will participate in the oral part of the admission procedure of applicants admitted to his proposed dissertation topic. During the entrance examination, he/she has the right of veto on the decision on the admission of these applicants to study on his/her proposed topic. The participation of the supervisor in the oral part of the admission procedure is always necessary, even if the topic of the doctoral thesis is agreed in advance.

The Faculty of Transportation Sciences does not announce an alternative date (for the regular date of the admission procedure) for oral and written entrance examinations for doctoral study programmes.
